Donald Trump's campaign website defaced by hackers

PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP'S campaign website was briefly taken over by hackers who defaced the site on Tuesday.

The defacement lasted less than 30 minutes, but the incident came as Trump's campaign and that of his opponent, Joseph R. Biden Jr., as well as law enforcement and intelligence agencies, have been on high alert for digital interference ahead of next week's election.

In a statement, Tim Murtough, a spokesman for the Trump campaign, confirmed the website's defacement and said it was "working with law enforcement authorities to investigate the source of the attack." He added, "There was no exposure to sensitive data because none of it is actually stored on the site. The website has been restored."

The FBI did not immediately comment on the incident. The defacement was first noted on Twitter by Gabriel Lorenzo Greshler, a journalist at the Jewish News of Northern California, while he was researching an article on climate change.

It was not clear whether the defacement was the work of foreign hackers or cybercriminals. But in a screed posted to Trump's website - donald-jtrump.com - the hackers claimed to have compromised "multiple devices" that gave them access to the "most internal and secret conversations" of the president and his relatives, including classified information. The hackers also accused the Trump administration, without proof, of having a hand in the origins of the coronavirus and cooperating with "foreign actors manipulating the 2020 elections."

The hackers appeared to be looking to generate cryptocurrency. They invited visitors to donate cryptocurrency to one of two funds - one labelled "Yes, share the data," the other labelled "No, Do not share the data." They solicited payments in Monero, a hard-to-trace cryptocurrency.

"After the deadline, we will compare the funds and execute the will of the world," they wrote, without specifying a deadline. The hackers also posted what they said was their encryption key, ostensibly to verify that whatever information they posted came from them. The key corresponded to an email address at a nonexistent internet site.

Though the defacement appeared to be part of a common cryptocurrency scam to get people to irreversibly donate money online, the incident took on added urgency one week before the election. Cybersecurity experts said that the incident could have been caused by tricking a website administrator into turning over their credentials.

Immunity against coronavirus diminishes over time: UK study

REUTERS

ANTIBODIES AGAINST THE novel coronavirus declined rapidly in the British population during the summer, a study found on Tuesday, suggesting protection after infection may not be long lasting and raising the prospect of waning immunity in the community.

Scientists at Imperial College London have tracked antibody levels in the British population following the first wave of Covid-19 infections in March and April.

Their study found that antibody prevalence fell by a quarter, from 6% of the population around the end of June to just 4.4% in September. That raises the prospect of decreasing population immunity ahead of a second wave of infections.

"We can see the antibodies and we can see them declining and we know that antibodies on their own are quite protective," Wendy Barclay, head of the Department of Infectious Disease at Imperial College London told reporters.

"On the balance of evidence I would say, with what we know for other coronaviruses, it would look as if immunity declines away at the same rate as antibodies decline away, and that this is an indication of waning immunity at the population level." Those for whom Covid-19 was confirmed with a gold standard PCR test had a less pronounced decline in antibodies, compared to people who had been asymptomatic and unaware of their original infection.

World's rich nations jostle to lead globalisation clubhouse

BLOOMBERG
October 28

THE RACE TO fill a role at the heart of world economic policy making is turning into a new battleground for the future of globalisation.

Angel Gurría retires next year as Secretary General of the Paris-based Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, and Washington is proposing US President Donald Trump's Deputy Chief of Staff, Christopher Liddell, as a successor.

The OECD acts like an auditor for globalisation, shaping policies and setting standards in areas from taxation to trade and education.

It's currently running contentious negotiations over digital taxes that are on the brink of imploding into a transatlantic trade war.

Liddell faces competition from European candidates on the other side of that issue, including former EU trade commissioner Cecilia Malmström.

Member countries have until November 1 deadline to put forward a candidate. On Wednesday, Switzerland nominated Blackrock's Philipp Hildebrand, a former head of the country's central bank.

Virus cases spiking just when they could hurt Trump most

BLOOMBERG
October 28

RECORD-SETTING LEVELS of US coronavirus cases are coming at the worst possible time politically for Donald Trump.

The president, who has spent months attacking mail-in voting, needs a dramatic turnout on Election Day to have any hope of overcoming his sagging poll numbers and the advantage Democrats have with mail-in voting. But the spiking case numbers and rising hospitalisations in key batleground states could deter some Republicans from voting, even though the party insists that Trump's supporters remain fiercely motivated to show up. The surge in cases also puts Trump on the defensive and keeps the focus at the end of the race on his handling of the pandemic, which Democrat Joe Biden has made a central part of his campaign, with the president spending the past eight months downplaying the virus and insisting it would go away.

"To a certain extent, it's going to cost him some votes," said Ed Rollins, a Republican strategist who's chairman of the pro-Trump Great America political action committee.

A Washington Post/ABC News poll released Wednesday indicated a rise in coronavirus in certain regions of the US may be impacting Trump's candidacy.

In Wisconsin, where the outbreak has been at record levels recently, likely voters favored Biden by 17 percentage points over Trump, 57% to 40%, according to the poll.
